The Exterior Design

31. Please help define your EXTERIOR by listed the type of architecture you prefer or by giving us a description of what you are looking for, or you may attached pictures of homes or features you like:

Bungalow
A forerunner of the craftsman style, you'll find rustic exteriors and sheltered-feeling interiors.

Neoclassical
Neoclassical homes exist in incarnations from one-story cottages to multilevel manses

Cape Cod
A true classic, Cape Cod homes have gabled roofs and unornamented fronts.

Colonial
An offshoot of the Cape Cod style, it features a rectangular design and second-floor bedrooms.

Craftsman
Full- or partial-width porches are framed by tapered columns and overhanging eaves.

Regency
The style borrows the Georgian's classic lines, yet eschews ornamentation.

French Provincial
Balance and symmetry define the French Provincial style, which has a steep hip roof

Shingle
An American style that echoes Queen Anne, it has unadorned doors and large porches.

Victorian
Built during the rise of the machine age, Victorian architecture incorporated decorative details such as patterned shingles

Tudor
Tudors have half-timbering on bay windows and upper floors, and steep cross gables.

Stick
Decorative horizontal, vertical, or diagonal boards are typical of this Victorian style

Georgian
With paired chimneys and a decorative crown, this style was named after English royalty

Greek Revival
Entryway columns and a front door surrounded by rectangular windows are characteristic

Italianate
This style has symmetrical bay windows in front, small chimneys, and tall windows.

Second Empire
This Victorian style features mansard roofs with dormer windows

Dutch Colonial
German settlers originated this style, which features a broad, barn-like roof.

Ranch
Ranch homes are set apart by pitched-roof construction, built-in garages, and picture windows

Prairie
Originated by Frank Lloyd Wright, this style can be house boxy or low-slung

Most of the homes we build are of southern vernacular architecture. This architecture is somewhat eclectic and has evolved around the lifestyles of the people and the building resources in our area. It can be a variety of different architectures but it always represents our southern lifestyle and heritage.
